

General long-term side effects

“I see a lot of news about vaccine side effects that are serious and long-term. And now the pharmaceutical companies are coming clean, but I'm sure they already knew all these risks when they were forcing us to get vaccinated.”

“I know it can seem concerning to see things on the news, but I want to reassure you that long-term side effects from any vaccine are extremely rare. Over the last 100 years, with the dozens of vaccines that were developed, side effects were almost always detected within the first 6 weeks.⁴¹ We are several years into Covid vaccination, with hundreds of millions of people in the U.S. having received Covid vaccines, and serious side effects are rare. I recommend that you get vaccinated to protect you against potential long complications from the virus, like long Covid, which currently affects 17 million adults in the US.”⁴²
